

THE COTTAGE ON KINGSLEY

INTERIOR DESIGN

WELCOME TO THE COTTAGE ON KINGSLEY

We approach every project as a complete expression of the families, architecture, and place behind it. Our role is to bring clarity to the process, develop a cohesive vision, and carry that vision through with the same level of care from the first conversation to the final detail.

From renovation to new construction, we lead the design with a construction-informed perspective—creating homes that are beautiful, considered, and designed for the art of living well.

Our Approach

Good design begins with planning and preparation—and understanding the whole picture.

We take the time to understand how you live, what you need, what you value, and what you're drawn to. We consider the architecture and character of the home, the practical requirements of daily life, and the feeling the space should create. From there, we translate those wants and needs into a cohesive design direction and carry it through every layer of the project.

We interpret the details, connect the dots, and make the decisions that bring the larger picture into focus—creating a home that feels distinctly yours, while remaining considered, cohesive, and built to stand the test of time.

The Process

A well-designed project starts with a clear process. Each phase builds on the last, allowing us to move from the initial vision through the finished space with clarity and purpose.

Discovery: We get to know you, your home, and the scope of your project.

Onboarding: We establish the project framework, gather the information we need, and prepare for design.

Design Development: We turn your needs and preferences into a cohesive design, refining every element with the larger vision in mind.

Sourcing + Procurement: We source, specify, order, and manage the details required to bring the design together.

Install + Photograph: We oversee the final transformation, place the finishing details, and document the completed space.

From start to finish, we lead the process so you can stay focused on the result.

Your Role

We begin by understanding your lifestyle, what matters to you, what isn't working, what you're drawn to, and where your priorities lie. Your input gives us the context to see the larger picture and shape a design around it.

As the project develops, we'll bring you into the decisions that matter, while taking the lead on the details that bring the vision together.

The process is collaborative, with clear points for your input—and our expertise guiding the work throughout.

What You Can Expect From Us

Throughout the project, our focus remains on creating a clear, cohesive design and a well-managed experience. You can expect thoughtful recommendations grounded in the needs of your home, your lifestyle, and the direction we establish together.

We consider the details as they relate to the whole home or project, anticipate what comes next, and keep the project moving through each stage. procurement and installation, we manage the many moving parts behind the scenes so the finished space feels effortless.

The TCOK Difference

Our work brings together design expertise, construction knowledge, and a highly personal approach to every project.

Construction-informed: We consider how design decisions relate to the existing structure, construction process, materials, and the practical realities of bringing a project to life.

Full-service: From the first design direction through sourcing, procurement, and installation, we manage the details and coordinate the moving pieces behind the scenes.

Highly considered: Every element is evaluated in relation to the whole home or project, creating spaces that feel cohesive rather than simply collected.

Personal: The result is grounded in the families who live there—their routines, preferences, priorities, and the way they want their home to feel.

Our approach brings clarity to complex projects and creates spaces that feel both deeply personal and thoughtfully resolved.

What Happens Next

We'll begin with Discovery—a conversation focused on your home, your project, and what you're looking to accomplish. From there, we'll move into Onboarding, where we'll establish the scope and project framework, complete the agreement, and gather the information needed to begin design.

From the first conversation forward, we'll lead the process and keep you informed along the way. Book your discovery call today on our website; we look forward to hearing from you!
