What's It About?

Motocross is Eva's life. Nothing beats the rush she feels ripping it up on the course—except maybe the moment just after the race when she removes her helmet, and the other riders realize they just got smoked by a twelve-year-old girl.

While fear of bullying leads Eva to keep her passion a secret at school, she's known in the local racing circuit as 'Eva Knievel,' a brazen competitor willing to risk it all to win. But when her daredevil behavior leaves her with a bruised ego and a busted bike, Eva is forced to reckon with the high costs of her beloved sport—financial, physical, and emotional.

As if that reality check weren't harsh enough, there's a new girl at school whose arrival not only threatens Eva's carefully crafted school persona, but her place on the podium, too.

Who Wrote It?

Rebecca Caprara is an author who loves creating stories that make readers laugh, think, and feel deeply. Before becoming a writer, she studied architecture and designed buildings—but eventually traded blueprints for books! Rebecca enjoys writing everything from picture books and poetry to middle grade and young adult novels. She's also an artist who loves to travel and has lived in Italy, Singapore, Canada, and the United States, giving her plenty of adventures to inspire her stories. Today she lives in Massachusetts with her family, where she hosts a book club for young readers at a local bookstore.

Rebecca believes stories can help us better understand ourselves and each other, and she loves visiting schools to encourage young people to read, write, and share their own ideas with the world. Learn more at: www.rebeccacaprara.com/
