Angular clarity, softened through comfort

The Modern Oak Dining Chair is a study in precision and restraint—an intentional counterpoint to the curves that define much of the collection. Where other pieces explore softness and flow, this chair introduces clarity through line, angle, and structure.

Crafted in oak, the chair's form is defined by clean, architectural geometry. The wood back is composed of two angled planes, precisely mitered at the center, creating a subtle fold that adds depth and visual tension. This crisp articulation gives the back its character—strong, graphic, and quietly expressive.

Each leg is tapered and mitered, reinforcing the chair's angular language while maintaining a light, elevated stance. The miters are not decorative but structural, revealing a disciplined approach to joinery and proportion.

In contrast, the upholstered seat introduces softness and comfort. Its tailored cushion acts as a counterbalance to the sharp geometry of the wood, inviting the body while tempering the chair's architectural rigor. The interplay between upholstered softness and angular structure creates a dynamic equilibrium—precise yet welcoming.

As part of the Frame collection, the Modern Oak Dining Chair embodies refined simplicity through contrast. It offers a deliberate pause from curves and biomorphic forms, bringing balance to the dining environment through clean lines, thoughtful construction, and understated comfort.
