BEAUTIFULLY DESIGNED HOMES are meant to be lived in. At least, that's the perspective of interior designer Prudence Bailey, who says, "You can't pickle your home. A home should be visually appealing but also be comfortable, personal and full of life." Known for sophisticated yet livable rooms, Bailey mixes color and pattern, old and new, traditional and modern. "I never want a room to feel too perfect or overly coordinated," she says. "I want it to feel layered and as though it has evolved over time." Bailey launched Prudence Bailey Interior Design in 2015, bringing business experience and a love of art and antiques to her second career. The full-service firm works across the Northeast with hopes to expand nationally and internationally, and adding a product collaboration along the way. For Bailey, success comes in many forms—accolades, awards, creative growth and, above all else, happy clients.

TOP LEFT Saturated blue sets the stage for an art-filled living room, where collected treasures give the space its unmistakable personality. ABOVE Elevated, joyful and inviting describes the vibrant, layered family room. BOTTOM A spirited living room balances rich color and expressive pattern with classic furnishings, creating a space that looks anything but predictable.
