MEET SHARI

Shari Leid is an author, keynote speaker, executive coach, and creator of the FLIP the Box® method, helping leaders, organizations, and communities transform the way they connect in an increasingly disconnected world.

An attorney with over 14 years of litigation experience, Shari understands that success is rarely determined by intelligence alone. The leaders who build extraordinary cultures, inspire lasting loyalty, and create meaningful impact are the ones who know how to foster genuine human connection.

That belief became the foundation for one of the most ambitious social experiments of its kind. Shari traveled solo across all 50 states, intentionally sharing a meal with a stranger in each one. Those fifty conversations became fifty unexpected teachers, revealing a powerful truth: our differences aren't barriers to connection. They are often our greatest teachers, challenging our assumptions, expanding our perspectives, and showing us possibilities we might otherwise never see.

Today, Shari translates those lessons into practical strategies that help organizations strengthen trust, elevate leadership, deepen collaboration, and create workplaces where people feel seen, valued, and inspired to contribute.

Through her signature FLIP the Box® method, Shari challenges audiences to rethink assumptions, embrace curiosity, and lead with greater courage, empathy, and intention. Her keynotes don't simply inspire–they create experiences that leave people thinking differently, connecting more deeply, and taking meaningful action long after the event ends.

Her work has been featured by TODAY, TIME, People, Us Weekly, Newsweek, and numerous national television, print, and podcast outlets, establishing Shari as a recognized voice in human connection and intentional leadership.
