Quiet structure, suspended weight

The Modern Console is defined by clarity of form and restrained sophistication. Its silhouette is sleek and architectural, designed to read as light and composed despite the richness of its materials.

A beautifully finished granite slab forms the top, spanning the full width of the console and visually bridging the two supporting legs. The stone appears to float, held in place by a concealed inset support that remains intentionally unseen. This hidden structure allows the granite to feel suspended, transforming mass into something visually effortless.

The two legs anchor the piece with calm confidence. Each leg is shaped with a soft radius along its outer edge, subtly easing the geometry and introducing a tactile softness to the otherwise clean, modern form. The result is a console that feels architectural yet approachable—precise without rigidity.

Below the stone top sits a sleek bank of drawers, finished with a smooth, uninterrupted back that reinforces the console’s streamlined presence. The drawers are integrated seamlessly into the composition, maintaining the purity of the overall silhouette while offering functional storage.

At 92 inches wide, 18 inches deep, and 33 inches high, the Modern Console is designed to command a wall with quiet authority. It reflects the PARISII philosophy of refined simplicity—where thoughtful proportion, concealed structure, and material integrity come together to create furniture that feels calm, intentional, and enduring.
