Sag Harbor Nightstand

The Sag Harbor Nightstand is a quiet study in proportion, layering, and refinement. Designed with restraint and intention, the piece balances architectural clarity with subtle softness—an expression of calm luxury rooted in material integrity.

Crafted from oak solids and veneer, the nightstand features gently curved edges along the front of the base, softening its silhouette and lending the piece an inviting, tactile presence. The form feels grounded yet light, with proportions that favor ease over formality.

Its defining gesture lies at the top: a thoughtfully inset surface that sits slightly recessed within the wood base. This layered construction creates a sense of depth and precision, allowing materials to interact rather than compete. The top itself is composed of a wood substrate capped with a layer of natural stone—its pale warmth and honed texture offering a refined contrast to the oak below.

Designed for bedrooms that value serenity and thoughtful detail, the Sag Harbor Nightstand feels both familiar and quietly distinctive. It is a piece that rewards close attention, revealing its craftsmanship through proportion, material transition, and understated elegance.

Sag Harbor Dresser

The Sag Harbor Dresser is a quiet study in proportion, layering, and refinement. Designed with restraint and intention, the piece balances architectural clarity with subtle softness—an expression of calm luxury rooted in material integrity.

Crafted from oak solids and veneer, the dresser features gently curved edges along the front of the base, softening its architectural scale and lending the piece an inviting, tactile presence. The form feels grounded yet composed, with a horizontal emphasis that reinforces its sense of ease and permanence.

Its defining gesture lies at the top: a thoughtfully inset surface that sits slightly recessed within the wood base. This layered construction creates a sense of depth and precision, allowing materials to interact rather than compete. The top is composed of a wood substrate capped with a layer of natural stone—its pale warmth and honed texture offering a refined contrast to the oak below.

Designed for bedrooms that value serenity and thoughtful detail, the Sag Harbor Dresser reads as furniture first—an object of presence and proportion—while offering generous storage for daily living. It is a piece that reveals its craftsmanship through material transition, subtle curvature, and understated elegance.
