A study in suspension, softness, and repose

The Entity Daybed is an exploration of balance—between weight and lightness, structure and softness, architecture and comfort. Crafted with a woven metal mesh base framed in steel, the piece appears to suspend its upholstered platform above the ground, creating a sense of visual levitation.

Large cylindrical bolsters define each end of the composition, lending the piece a sculptural presence while framing a generous cushioned seat designed for reclining, gathering, or quiet retreat. The interplay of woven metal, steel, and upholstery reflects the collection's ongoing dialogue between crafted materiality and refined form.

More than a place to rest, the Entity Daybed is conceived as a destination within the room—an expression of repose rendered through structure, proportion, and artisanal detail.
